WASHINGTON, March 5.—Heartbroken because his dream of having an intercontinental railroad connect the three Americas had never materialized. Hinton Rowan Helper, former United States consul at Buenos Ayres, committed suicide here to-day. He was a native of North Carolina.

He was an author, railroad nrojector and Civil War veteran. He vainly sought means to carry out his project, planned more than forty years ago, for a Three-Americas Railway, designed to connect the Straits of Behring and Magellan. He was born in North Carolina in 1829.
